

Antique furniture firm invest in 21st century technology

Leading IT and business consultancy to help antique furniture specialists to implement innovative Microsoft Business Solutions-Navision software

Cedilla Systems, one of the top three UK resellers of Microsoft Business Solutions-Navision, are to provide one of the countries largest antique furniture dealers with a fully integrated ERP (Enterprise Resource Planning) software solution.

Tomlinsons, a York based firm, has sold antique furniture across the globe for over 25 years. As well as selling to the trade the company also deals directly to the public via its Fine Furniture Club of which there are over 10,000 members.

The company also boasts the UK's largest antique furniture warehouse. The new Microsoft Navision system from Cedilla Systems will play an influential role in managing the warehouse. Cedilla will be integrating its warehouse management software with the latest bar coding equipment allowing for Tomlinsons staff to keep precise records of stock. This will mean a vast improvement in the efficiency and accuracy of the company's stock movements and checks.

Tomlinsons are expecting a number of benefits from a single integrated system, including improved warehouse management processes, easier access to information across the business and higher levels of customer service.

"Investment in a Microsoft Navision system is an investment in our future" commented Donald Haymes, Financial Director of Tomlinsons. "We chose Cedilla Systems because we feel that they are the best people to drive our company in this direction. We are looking forward to working with them on the project".

This has been one of many new business wins for Cedilla since the company's management buy out earlier this year. Mike Dickson, Managing Director is delighted with the deal. " At Cedilla we are committed to meeting all our customer's requirements, and aim to exceed their expectations. We are extremely confident that we can help Tomlinsons to achieve their business objectives, and provide a superior level of service for years to come."
