

Cedilla Systems secure substantial order from The Burnden Group plc

Manchester, 30th November 2001: Manchester based business software specialists Cedilla Systems have secured an order of a little under £½ million from The Burnden Group plc.

Cedilla develops systems using Navision, a fully integrated software suite. The software has been developed to allow it to be tailored to fit with the exact requirements of those that use it. Cedilla spends time with its clients to understand their needs, creating a perfect fit every time.

“The Burnden Group have ambitious plans for the future, we are keen to take the opportunity to be involved in helping them to achieve their objectives. We are delighted to have secured this order and look forward to a long association with them” commented Barry Matthews, managing director, Cedilla Systems.

In less than two years The Burnden Group plc has taken its industry by storm with its innovative Conservatory Roof System, K2. This has allowed them to make this substantial investment. The investment has been made into purchasing an integrated enterprise system, which covers a wide range of procedures from goods inwards through to management accounts and production.

The Burnden Group’s, managing director, Gary Fielding, said, “We chose Cedilla Systems as they have an unrivalled reputation for delivering innovative financial accounting, logistics and customer relationship management software solutions. They have worked extensively with high profile companies such as CORUS, Delancey Estates and Granada Group. We look forward to working with them”.
